Governor Kathleen

Sebelius has been making a name for herself on the national stage recently, fueling rumors that she is destined for bigger arenas than Topeka, Kansas. Gov. Sebelius is on the short list to be Barack Obama's Vice Presidential running mate as he gets closer to securing the nomination. Gov. Sebelius has been actively campaigning for Obama on network political talk shows and campaign stops which helped Obama coast over Clinton in the Kansas caucus and Midwestern states.

In January Gov. Sebelius was bestowed the honor of delivering the Democratic response to President Bush's last State of the Union Address, which was viewed by millions of people across the world. She has also been making constant headlines with her historic battle against coal plants being built in western Kansas. Currently the Democratic Governor has a 64% approval rating in the traditionally conservative state of Kansas. However, Gov. Sebelius's most telling sign that she is heading for bigger things might be her invitation and attendance at the 2007 meeting of the notorious Bilderberg Group in Istanbul, Turkey. The Bilderberg Group is a collection of the world's most elite and powerful people who secretly meet once a year among tremendous mystery and security. The conference attendees are sworn to secrecy and are under strict instructions to not divulge what goes on at the conference to outside sources.

The Bilderberg Group was officially formed in 1954, primarily by the powerful banking families of the Rothschilds and the Rockefellers, along with royal Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands. The group annually includes around 130 guests who consist of Europe and America's most wealthy and noble elite from politics, royalty, business, banking, education, media, and the military.

Notable Bilderberg attendees include David Rockefeller, Rothschild Family Banking, George Soros, Paul Wolfowitz, Donald Rumsfeld, Henry Kissinger, Bill Clinton, Hillary Clinton, Zbigniew Brzezinski, Prince Charles, Al Gore, Colin Powell, Nelson Rockefeller, Richard Perle, Tony Blair, Gordon Brown, Alan Greenspan, Rupert Murdoch, as well as the CEO's of mega corporations and financial institutions such as Deutsche Bank, BP, Royal Dutch Shell, The Federal Reserve Banks, IBM, Goldman Sachs, Siemens AG, Google, Eli Lilly, etc. The overall goal of the Bilderberg Group is to bring about a one-world government and global financial system, under the political body of UN style government and the central banking systems of the Rockefellers and Rothschilds. David Rockefeller described the group's goals in 1991 as the Chairman of the Bilderbergs, "We are grateful to the Washington Post, the New York Times, Time magazine, and other great publications whose directors have attended our meetings and respected their promises of discretion for almost forty years. ... It would have been impossible for us to develop our plan for the world if we had been subject to the bright lights of publicity during these years. But the world is now more sophisticated and prepared to march towards a world government which will never again know war but only peace and prosperity for the whole of humanity." The Bilderberg Group is credited with conceiving and establishing the European Union as the centerpiece of their global government plan. Like their purely American brother, The Council on Foreign Relations, the Bilderbergs are devoted to the rapid spread of globalization through the government and economy, with themselves positioned at the top to control the wealth of the world.

One central idea in this group is that of rejecting national sovereignty in favor of multi-national non-democratic institutions, such as the World Trade Organization, World Bank, European Union, and the emerging North American Union. The Bilderbergs, along with the CFR, have been making gradual process toward a one-world government since the end of WWII. In America, globalization has already rapidly changed the economic and political landscape through treaties such as NAFTA and the Security and Prosperity Partnership (SPP), which are intent on forming a North American community of government and economy. Bilderberg Group founders Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands and the Rockefellers were notoriously involved in eugenics and had ties to the Nazi Party. Prince Bernhard was a member of the elite SS. Since his death, his daughter, Queen Beatrix has taken his place. Award winning investigative journalist Daniel Estulin claims that the elite inner circle of the Bilderberg Group still advocates aspects of modern eugenics and has the end goal of eventually reducing the world's population by 80%, as called for by the 1974 UN Assessment on Biodiversity. So what exactly is Governor Sebelius doing meeting with the ultra elite of the world, and what good did it do for Kansas? The trip was scarcely reported on by the Kansas media. The Governor's office released a statement saying she was there to speak about "cooperation and consensus-building in government". Sebelius's spokeswoman, Nicole Corcoran, was quoted as saying about the visit, "It is a rather prestigious group. She was pleased to be invited."

The Bilderbergs paid for Gov. Sebelius's travel expenses, however the Kansas taxpayers picked up the rest of the tab, totaling $1,274. The only other Governor invited to attend was Gov. Rick Perry of Texas, who apparently teamed with Gov. Sebelius on her presentation about "cooperation and consensus-building in government" at the conference. The choice of Gov. Perry for the Bilderbergs is fairly obvious, since Gov. Perry has been the leading advocate of the Bilderberg backed "NAFTA Superhighway" project, specifically the Trans-Texas Corridor portion which is set to stretch across Texas despite massive protests from citizens. The Texas Congress tried to put a two-year moratorium on the Trans-Texas Corridor, which will grab millions of acres of private land, however Gov. Perry vetoed it. The "NAFTA Superhighway" is a central key to the plan of the North American Community put forth by globalists such as the Bilderbergs. The proposed KC Smartport is supposed to be a future central inland port of the superhighway system which will extend all of North America from southern Mexico to northern Canada. Like the superhighway, the KC Smartport would be foreign owned and would place Mexican customs officials at the inland port to check all the cargo coming in from the south. Gov. Sebelius has been supportive of the proposed KC Smartport, even though it is technically located in Missouri. Is the Governor indicating that she might favor the expansion of the &lsquo;NAFTA Superhighway&rsquo; to Kansas and has no problem with it as a threat to American sovereignty? This raises a number of questions of Gov. Sebelius, her connections to the globalists of the power elite and what that means for Kansas. Gov. Sebelius has also been supportive of other globalist positions such as driver&rsquo;s licenses for illegal immigrants, which is currently being challenged in the Kansas Congress. Given her track record on illegal immigration it seems that Gov. Sebelius would support further measures which threaten American workers and sovereignty such as the expansion of the &lsquo;NAFTA Superhighway&rsquo; in Kansas.

The highway system is made up from existing roads such as I-70 and I-35, making Kansas the central crossroads of the project. Once the KC Smartport is complete, Kansas will be a key asset to the Mexican trucking companies looking to freely move across the United States&hellip;at the expense of American workers. Will Gov. Sebelius sell out Kansas workers to the globalists and their foreign workers, or will she simply catapult passed us onto the national stage? It should be noted that Sen. John Edwards attended the Bilderberg Conference in 2004, shortly before being named the Democratic Vice Presidential candidate. Perhaps the Queen of Kansas will soon have a new crown.
